

Modality contributions to prediction preservation

Reference target: the same frozen model with all three observed modalities

Positive: helps preserve the full-input prediction. Negative: increases divergence in the averaged coalition comparisons.

Classification compares all class probabilities; regression compares raw scores. Mean over all 20 cases, both references.

The full-input prediction is a comparison target, not a true label. These values do not measure Macro-F1 or MAE performance.

